DETAILED ACTION

Claims 11-28 are pending in the application.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 11-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Teles et al. {WO02/02544; see English equivalent US Pat. 6,756,503 B2}, in view of Lestak et al. {Chem. Eng., vol. 7, 1997, pp. 72-76}.

Teles et al. teach a process comprising distilling methanol from a reaction mixture, obtained from the reaction of propylene and hydrogen peroxide to form propylene oxide, in which the methanol is separated off from the reaction mixture at the top of a first and second distillation column (see Cols. 1-4). The difference between the presently claimed invention and what Teles et al. teach is that Teles et al. do not teach using a dividing wall column to conduct the distillation.

Art Unit: 1621

However, Lestak et al. teach dividing wall columns, which can be utilized in multi-component separation distillation (especially ternary separation), that are more energy efficient and lower costing than conventional distillation columns (see pp. 72-76 and Figures 2A, 2B, 3, 6B and 11).

It would have been prima facie obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art, in view of the Teles et al. and Lestak et al. references, to arrive at the presently claimed invention because Teles et al. teach a similar process for distilling the solvent from an oxirane reaction process and Lestak et al. teach that dividing wall columns are advantageously utilized in multi-component separation distillation. Additionally, the apparatus as presently claimed would also have been obvious, in view of the Teles et al. and Lestak et al. references because Teles et al. teach the reactor component of the presently claimed apparatus (see Col. 6 and 7) and Lestak et al. teach the separation component.

One having ordinary skill in the art, desiring to arrive at a more cost effective and efficient process for distilling the solvent from an oxirane reaction process, would have been motivated to combine the teachings of the Teles et al. and Lestak et al. references to arrive at the presently claimed invention. Therefore, the presently claimed invention would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art.

Double Patenting

The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. A nonstatutory obviousness-type double patenting rejection is appropriate where the conflicting claims are not identical, but at least one examined application claim is not patentably distinct from the reference claim(s) because the examined application claim is either anticipated by, or would have been obvious over, the reference claim(s). See, e.g., In re Berg, 140 F.3d 1428, 46 USPQ2d 1226 (Fed. Cir. 1998); In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) or 1.321(d) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent either is shown to be commonly owned with this application, or claims an invention made as a result of activities undertaken within the scope of a joint research agreement.

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

Claims 11-28 are provisionally rejected on the ground of nonstatutory obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 11-29 of copending Application No. 10521784 and claims 11-30 of copending Application No. 10516939. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because all three applications generically claim a process for distilling the solvent (i.e., methanol), used in an oxirane synthesis process, comprising using a dividing wall column.

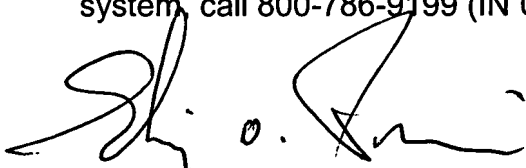

This is a provisional obviousness-type double patenting rejection because the conflicting claims have not in fact been patented.
